

T. Andrew Culbert

Associate General Counsel, Microsoft Corporation
Redmond, WA

Andy received a bachelor of arts degree in biology from Williams College, Williamstown, Mass. After college, he served in the Peace Corps for two years in Butembo, Congo Zaire), teaching biology, chemistry, physics and mathematics in French to Congolese high school students. At William & Mary Law School, Andy was a Legal Writing Course Instructor and a member of the William & Mary Law Review. Following law school, he worked in the litigation department and became a partner at Drinker, Biddle & Reath, LLC, where he focused mainly on intellectual property law. Andy is currently Associate General Counsel for Microsoft Corporation and head of Microsoft's worldwide patent infringement docket. He manages all of Microsoft's worldwide patent infringement litigation, including hiring and supervising of all outside counsel, directing strategic and tactical handling of the cases (currently about 50), editing briefs and presenting oral arguments, and advising the client about its patent assets and liabilities. Andy is also an adjunct professor in the intellectual property LLM program at the University of Washington School of Law. He has tried a number of cases in federal courts across the country, and has written and spoken extensively on intellectual property issues.