ZBIGNIEW BRZEZINSKI

Herbert Lehman Professor of Government and Director, Research Institute on Communist Affairs, Columbia University
The 45-year-old Brzezinski is one of the nation's acknowledged authorities on international politics. He is currently on leave from his post at Columbia University to head the Trilateral Commission. He was on leave during 1966-68 to serve on the Policy Planning Council of the U.S. State Department, and during the 1968 elections to direct the Foreign Policy Task Forces of Vice President Humphrey. He has written a dozen books, several of them published eight different languages. His two latest are Between Two Ages: America's Role in the Technetronic Era (1971), and The Fragile Blossom: Crisis and Change in Japan (1971). He has written numerous articles on comparative government and international affairs in scholarly journals and American and foreign magazines, including a tri-weekly column in Newsweek in 1971-72. He has been frequently interviewed on such television programs as Today, Meet the Press, Open Road and Firing Line. Born in Warsaw, Poland, he holds a Ph.D., from Harvard. He was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1960 and a Ford Foundation Grant in 1970 to study Japan's role in international politics.

GENERAL T.R. MILTON, U.S.A.F.

United States Representative, NATO Military Committee
General T.R. Milton is a military officer with a long and distinguished record. He assumed his duties as U.S. representative to the NATO Military Committee in 1971 after serving as deputy chairman for one year. Prior to the NATO assignment, Gen. Milton was Comptroller of the Air Force and before that its Inspector General. Previously he had been chief of staff of the Tactical Air Command, deputy chief of staff of the Pacific air command, commander of the 13th Air Force in Southeast Asia, and of the 41st Air Division in Japan. For three years he was executive assistant to the Secretary of the Air Force and before that director of operations for the Military Air Transport Service. In 1948, Gen. Milton was chief of staff for the command that directed operations for the Berlin Airlift. During World War II, he served with the Eighth Air Force in Europe. Gen. Milton is a 1940 graduate of West Point. He was promoted to the rank of four star general in August of 1971.

DR. HERBERT J. SPIRO

Planning & Coordination Staff, U.S. State Department
Professor of Political Science, University of Pennsylvania
College professor, author, foreign policy planner. These are descriptions of Herbert J. Spiro, 49, who has been on the State Department Staff for the past three years and the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania for the past eight. He formerly taught at Amherst College and was chairman of the Asian and African Spiro has written seven books and edited or co-authored another seven. His latest titles are Politics as the Master Science: From Plato to Mao (1970), and Responsibility in Government: Theory and Practice (1969). Spiro, a summa cum laude graduate of Harvard College in 1949, holds an M.A. and Ph.D. from Harvard University. He has done considerable study and research, especially in the area of African political systems, under a variety of prestigious fellowships, including Fulbright, Rockefeller and Guggenheim. He is a native of Germany and attended high school and junior college in Texas. He was an enlisted man in the U.S. Army during World War II.

DR. ROBERT E. WARD

Professor and Director, Center for Research in International Studies, Stanford University

Past President, American Political Science Association

Dr. Ward for many years has been recognized as a leading authority in this country on the Japanese political system. Before joining the faculty at Stanford this past fall, he taught at the University of Michigan for 25 years, and for five of those years served as director of the prestigious American Political Science Association and at the same time was president of the Association of Asian Studies. He was chairman of the board of directors of the Social Science Research Council from 1969 to 1971, one of several important national board and council positions he has held. He currently serves in various consultant capacities for both the U.S. State Department and Department of Defense. Dr. Ward has written, edited and co-authored more than 60 articles and books in the past quarter-century, with a good majority of the titles dealing with Japan, its systems and its people. He did his baccalaureate work at Stanford and holds M.A. and Ph. D. degrees from the University of California at Berkeley.

DR. NILS F. WIKNER

Director, Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) Task Force, Department of Defense

The 44-year-old native of Hoquiam, Wash., is one of this nation's key men in the strategic arms limitation talks. Wikner, a graduate of Pacific Lutheran University, has spent most of his career involved in the study of nuclear reaction. After completing his Ph.D. in physics at the University of California at Berkeley in 1957, he became involved in nuclear reactor design at Aerojet General Nucleonics in California. For the next seven years, he worked on central station power reactor design, nuclear rocket propulsion, nuclear space vehicles, and the effects of nuclear explosion, at General Dynamics'

General Atomic Division. He joined the Federal Government's Defense Atomic Support Agency in 1965 and became its deputy director for science and technology in 1966. After a stint as scientific advisor to General Creighton Abrams in Vietnam, and a period as executive vice president of Maxwell Laboratories in San Diego, he joined the Net Technical Assessment Staff of the Secretary of Defense, and was its acting director in 1972-73.

YAAKOV MORRIS

Counsellor to the Permanent Israeli Mission to the U.S.

Mr. Morris is a prominent Israeli diplomat, lecturer and author who was born and educated in Ireland. In 1947, he ran the British blockade halting immigration to Palestine of Nazi survivors and joined a Kibbutz in western Galilee. He fought in Israel's War of Independence in 1948 and then worked to help establish new villages in development areas. A professional journalist, he also served as correspondent for several English, American and Israeli newspapers. Morris joined the Israel Ministry for Foreign Affairs in 1955 as an information expert and in 1957 was appointed Consul of Information in New York. From 1967 to 1969 he was deputy director of the Information Division of the ministry in Jerusalem. Since then, he has headed the Israel diplomatic representation to India, and been counsellor of the embassy in Stockholm. He has been in his present post since 1972. Morris' best known books have been Masters of the Desert, with an introduction by the late David Ben Gurion, On the Soil of Israel, Israel's Struggle for Peace and The Kibbutz in Transition.
