

Visiting Assistant Professor: The Lewis & Clark College Department of Psychology invites applications for a oneyear visiting assistant professorship beginning Fall 2016 with the potential of renewal for a second year. Ph.D. required at time of appointment. Potential for excellent teaching at an undergraduate, liberal arts institution is essential. Ideal candidates will be prepared to teach courses in research methodology, introductory statistics, and introductory courses in developmental psychology or neuroscience. There may also be opportunities to teach advanced courses in the candidate's field. The teaching load will be three courses per semester. While ideal candidates might be broadly defined as developmental psychologists, individuals with interests in neuroscience, cognition, and cognitive science are also encouraged to apply.

A complete application must include:

1. a letter of application including a statement of teaching philosophy, teaching experience and research interests, as well as a description of how the applicant's teaching and/or work in the campus community will contribute to a culture of inclusion and campus diversity.
2. a curriculum vitae.

All materials should be addressed to Todd Watson, Chair Psychology Search Committee, and must be submitted via Interfolio <http://apply.interfolio.com/34442>.

Lewis & Clark College, an Equal Opportunity Employer, is committed to preparing students for leadership in an increasingly interdependent world, and affirms the educational benefits of diversity (see <http://www.lclark.edu/dept/about/diversity.html>). We particularly encourage applicants to explain how their teaching at Lewis & Clark (or their personal experiences) would contribute to a learning community that values diversity.

Review of applications will begin on March 22, 2016, and will continue until the position is filled. Lewis & Clark College, located in Portland, Oregon, is an Equal Opportunity Employer. The College will conduct background checks on finalists for the position.
