

Federal Work Study Request

Lewis & Clark Law School

Federal Work Study (FWS) is a federal financial aid program. Earnings from FWS are to be used to cover education-related expenses. When awarded, FWS is allotted by the full academic year. Work study funds earned in summer are expected to be saved to cover expenses for the academic year.

To be eligible for Federal Work Study, a student must have filed the current year FAFSA (www.fafsa.ed.gov) and have sufficient financial need to qualify. In order to add Federal Work Study to a financial aid award it may be necessary to decrease other forms of aid.

Student: Complete this request and return it to the Law School's Business Services office immediately after receiving a FWS-eligible offer of employment.
